BREWING

BEER IS MADE FROM 4 BASIC INGREDIENTS:

BARLEY

WATER

HOPS

YEAST

STEP

#3 BREWING
Within the brew kettle the wort is then boiled for a prescribed time interval to precipitate unwanted elements and to infuse the addition of flavorful hops.

STEP

#4 COOLING
The boiled and still very hot wort is then cooled by passing through a heat exchanger to condition the wort to the ideal fermentation temperature.

STEP

#5 FERMENTATION
Based upon beer style, the appropriate strain of brewers yeast is added to the wort inside conical bottom fermentation tanks. The yeast breaks down the malt sugars to produce alcohol and CO2, which then gives beer its familiar characteristics. Also significant flavor development and maturity takes place here.

STEP

#2 MASHING
A combination mash/lauder tun is used to steep the malted grain in hot water to extract the soluble goodness (wort) from the grain to prepare for brewing.

STEP

#6 CONDITIONING
The beer then ages and mellow in specific serving tanks for several weeks to achieve optimum taste and the ideal level of carbonation.

STEP

#1 MILLING
Whole malted barley is portioned and then milled to the proper granular consistency. The malt mill discharges to a large hopper in preparation for mashing.

STEP

#7 TAPPING
The finished beer is then packaged for consumption.

CHEERS!
